Reviews

*Good electronic book and valuable one. It is one of the most incredible publication we have read through. It is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding, once you begin to read the book.

The variability in the mean daily hydrograph levels, which had diminished during the summer drawdown, returned in late September. In October 1971 the hydrographs of Devils Hole and well 17S/50-36dd resumed slow and parallel declines. It became evident that the cessation of pumping for wells 4, 5, and 6 had produced only about 0.2 ft (6 cm) of recovery in Devils Hole and that continued pumping of wells 1, 2, or 3 was lowering the water level. The recorder in Devils Hole malfunctioned in midDecember 1971, but the recorder in well 17S/50-36dd continued to operate. On December 20, wells 2 and 3 were shut down, and a slow recovery of the water level began in the observation well. In January 1972, well 1 stopped pumping, and the recovery in well 17S/50-36dd increased in rate. Analysis of the data collected through January 1972 showed that wells 7, 8, and 13 had no detectable effect on the water level in Devils Hole; wells 1, 4, and 5 had significant effects; and either well 2 or well 3, or both, had a measurable effect. No direct hydraulic data pertinent to the effect of well 6 had been obtained before it was abandoned. However, reduction of the discharge records of Crystal Pool during the late summer of 1971 show that about 90 percent of the well 6 discharge was compensated by reduction of the flow of Crystal Pool. Because observation well 17S/50-36dd did not respond as clearly to pumping...
