EXTRACTS FROM THE DIARY OF OTTO WIDMANN NESTING HABITS OF THE PURPLE MARTIN Old Orchard, Mo. , January 24, 1890. There is certainly more to be said about birds than merely to describe the nests and eggs, and it is a real fact that the habits of our birds, even the commonest, are not too well known. For instance, do we not find in some of our best works that the Martin raises two broods in a season, or that it is said to raise even two or three broods in the southern states With a better knowledge of the habits of the bird such statements would not be possible, considering that the Martin does not commence nesting in Louisiana before April, although the first arrives in February. The time required for a successful rearing of a brood of Martins does not vary much from ten weeks, of which about two weeks are occupied by nidification and oviposition; two weeks are necessary for incubation; four weeks are passed in feeding the nestlings, and the remainder is spent in feeding, leading and teaching the fledglings. Here in this vicinity the Martins begin to arrive in the latter part of March, but of a record of eleven years the earliest date on which young Martins have left the Martinbox is June 25. The following list gives the earliest and latest dates of young Martins leaving the box, i. e. , able to fly: 1878 July 16-July 22...
